

WISCONSIN EIGHT WILL BE UNIQUE Candidates Alone to Frame Platform in Few Days.

UNDER NEW PRIMARY LAW Indications Point to Defeat of La Follette Forces by Connor's Stalwarts.

A State convention, utterly unlike any ever before held, will take place at Madison, Wis., in a few days. It will be composed exclusively of candidates for office, and its business will be to prepare a platform for the Wisconsin primary law. It will constitute the last scene in the first performance of the new Wisconsin primary law, in whose workings a profound interest has been shown all over the country and in several foreign countries.

Under the Wisconsin plan, the nominees are all chosen by direct primary. This part has been done. Then, shortly after the primary, the nominees for places on the State ticket, for the two houses of the legislature, and the hold-over senators, meet in convention and prepare their platform. Thus the people have the privilege of nominating the men they want, and then after making the nominations they receive from their candidates the most direct possible pledges as to what they will do. The ordinary State convention is a pretty irresponsible body, but the convention made up of the men who expect to be elected to the offices is decidedly responsible. It doesn't make promises without some notion of carrying them into execution.

Wisconsin's primary law did some unexpected things. It proved that a leader who undertakes to be a boss is liable to discomfiture. Senator La Follette was a "hoist by his own petard," the primary law having taken away from the man who had created it, and giving him his first severe defeat since he came to power. It brought to the surface a new candidate for political bossship in the person of W. D. Connor, nominee for lieutenant governor, chairman of the State committee, several times a millionaire, and the real brains of the movement which was engineered for the defeat of La Follette.

With great ingenuity he waited till La Follette had committed himself to Lenroot for governor; then he went about quietly organizing a disaffection, telling what a good man Davidson was, lining up the Scandinavians, and dealing with the stalwarts. He made it his aim to be reckoned with in Wisconsin. If he joins forces with the stalwarts, and can draw Governor Davidson and his Scandinavian following into the combination, he is sure to win. There will be a great fight between him and La Follette for control of the State. The Senatorial seat from Madison, which La Follette is yet ready to concede, but that he would not concede to the Senate is not seriously doubted.

The question of which side shall control the coming convention is of great interest. Indications are that the La Follette people have lost the legislature as well as the State ticket, and that the Connor-Davidson-stalwart element will organize the platform convention.

REBELS TO ATTACK FOR POOR ALLIANCE

manding the only government force of fighting strength, stranded near Consuelo Del Sur and is marching on the capital.

The railroad has been blown up between Consuelo and Havana and the bridges destroyed. As a result, the rebels are back to the capital, while miles to the eastward Guerra with his entire army is hurrying toward Havana to make a junction with Asbert and Castillo, leaving his army helpless.

Zayas to Be President.

With General Castillo's army is Alfredo Zayas, leader of the Liberal party. It is the plan of the insurgents on capturing Havana to set up a provisional government, with Zayas as President. They will then demand that if the United States intervenes it shall deal with Zayas rather than the deposed Palma.

Cienfuegos is threatened with capture by the insurgents. Orestes Ferrera has sent word to the city to remove the women and children, as he intends to attack the place.

There is a special reason for this. Cienfuegos is the port to which the Mariel steamer is ordered. When the warship steams into the harbor the insurgents wish to be in control of the city. They believe this will help their cause materially.

Ships' Arrival Forced Cause.

The sending of the United States warships to Cuba at this time is regarded as significant. September 15 is the date set by the insurgents before which the government must accept their terms or meet them in open warfare. It was the plan of the insurgent leaders to take no active steps to capture Havana until after this date. The ordering of the United States ships here forced a change of plan.

They fear American forces may be used to capture Palma. Therefore they determined to capture Havana before sufficient warships can arrive to prevent this.

Palma himself made an immediate attack on Havana possible. Before he suspended constitutional guarantees and assumed dictatorial powers the insurgent armies were not large enough to dare attack. But Palma's act drove so many men from the insurgent camps that the leaders now feel confident that by a quick dash they can capture the city and seize the reins of government.

Sympathizers in the City.

When the attack is made the insurgents will be materially aided by sympathizers within the city. Recruiting is going on in the capital under the noses of the government officials. It is known that many of the recruits have been held purposely in the city to start an uprising in conjunction with the rebel attack. This will undoubtedly make it easier for Guerra, Asbert, and Castillo to force their way into the city.

Fighting is expected to commence today to the south of the city and news of the engagement is expected at any moment. Last night a detachment of volunteers and rural guards was dispatched to attack Castillo and Asbert. If the little army proceeds very far it cannot fail to clash with the advance guard of the insurgents.

Fall of Havana Expected.

Castillo and Guerra are already in communication and will work together. As soon as Guerra, coming from the

When a European King wants really to enjoy life he chooses for his hosts an American peeress. King Alfonso and Queen Victoria are the latest exemplars.

Alfonso and his Queen made extensive visits to two famous Scotch castles and in both instances their mistresses were American women who had married Englishmen. That Spanish royalty was never entertained more charmingly goes without saying.

The first visit of the King and Queen of Spain in Scotland was to Fyvie, where they were the guests of the beautiful and accomplished Lady Leith, who before her marriage was Miss January of St. Louis.

NAMED FULL TICKET HEADED BY HEARST

Plan of Managers to Leave Vacancies
Thwarted by Independence League.

Having nominated William Randolph Hearst for governor of New York on such terms that his election is practically impossible, the Independence League convention at Carnegie Hall last night cheered him more than half an hour when he appeared to accept the nomination.

It had been the desire of the Hearst managers that only one or two nominations, especially that of Hearst, should be made, and then the rest of the ticket be left vacant as a basis for trading and fusion with the Democrats. But Hearst was swamped by his convention, which insisted on naming a full ticket, and then clinched it by adopting a resolution to refuse to fuse with the Democrats.

Acceptance of Mr. Hearst.

In accepting the nomination, Mr. Hearst said in part:

"I am honored to have been nominated by this platform. I am proud to run on this platform. I am devoted heart and soul to the principles expressed in every line of it.

"I have said that my program is not socialism, or radicalism, or extreme of any kind. It is simply Americanism. Because we have received courtesies and consideration from the Democrats, sympathetic Democrats, certain hostile agencies have cried 'deal.' All the 'deal' that is contemplated is expressed in this platform.

"We promise an honest administration. We promise an impartial enforcement of the laws.

"We promise to abolish class distinction and class legislation, and to restore to the government the good of the greatest number. We ask in return the honorable support of all honest men. If that is a 'deal,' it is a square deal."

The Ticket Is Remarkable.

The ticket nominated with Mr. Hearst is remarkable. For lieutenant governor, Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler, aristocrat of aristocrats, radical of radicals, free-thinker, millionaire, young, enthusiastic, impetuous, a lawyer and speaker of much ability, philanthropist and ardent reformer, will probably give much strength to the ticket. He is an Astor, a Stuyvesant, and yet the friend of every laborer. He will get the Irish vote in all York State, they say, because of the campaign he helped make in Ireland for home rule.

John Ford, single-taxer and author of the famous Ford taxation law of New York, is named for attorney general. For secretary of state, John S. Whitaker, a union laborer, is named. Charles H. W. Auel is named for comptroller of state. George A. Fuller, of Jefferson county, was nominated for State treasurer, and Frank L. Gorman is named for State engineer.

PETRIFIED BODY SIMPLY A FAKE, SAY OFFICIALS

Mayor Paff and Coroner
Moore Positive Not Human Remains.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Sept. 12.—The story published in a Washington paper this morning relative to the discovery that the body found recently in the old Carlyle House is human, and not a fake, was read with much amusement by Alexandrians.

When the alleged body was first discovered by Mr. Simpson, the lessee of the Carlyle House, it was visited by throngs of persons, all eager to see the "petrified man." Simpson promised to dig out the man and show him to the public, the head and outlines of his body only being visible the first time he was shown. Then came the announcement by Simpson that he had decided not to dig up the body, but was going to let it remain where it was.

How Fake Was Discovered.

This aroused the interest of the police, and Chief Goodie, Coroner Moore, and Mayor Paff made an official investigation of the matter. They called at the Carlyle House and told Simpson that they wanted to view the body as the coroner wanted to decide whether an inquest was necessary or not. Simpson then admitted to these officials, they say, that the whole thing was a fake. The party then visited the remains, which were lying as they were found and the coroner, taking up an old sword which was lying near, hit the head of the "petrified man" breaking off his ear, which, when examined, was pronounced to be plaster. At that time Simpson informed the officials that he intended to bring to light more "petrified men."

Mayor Paff, when seen this morning, stated that he was positive that the remains were not those of a human being, and that the whole matter was a fake. He stated he was surprised to see the publication in a newspaper this morning that Dr. Hrdlicka, of the Smithsonian Institution, claimed that the remains were those of a human being.

Coroner Moore Interviewed.

Coroner Moore also stated to a Times reporter this morning that he was certain the remains he viewed in the old Carlyle house were not those of a human being.

"Whether a human being's remains have been taken and covered with plaster of Paris and put in place of those that I viewed, I am not prepared to say," remarked the coroner, "but one thing is certain—the plaster body from which I knocked the ear was not a human one."

Officials of the Smithsonian Institution said this morning that Dr. Hrdlicka had made a visit to Alexandria, but went away without seeing the remains. His visit was unofficial, he made no report to the office and nothing is known of the result of his investigation.

THE ADMIRAL SCHLEY TOSSED BY HURRICANE

Miss Shadd, of This City, Was a Passenger, and Tells of Experience.

That the hurricane of which Washington has heard so much in the past week was even more severe than was realized here is manifest from reports which have reached Washington. Miss Marion P. Shadd, of Washington, was among the passengers on the Admiral Schley, which ran right into the hurricane and for twenty-four hours made desperate efforts to get out of the wind zone, but without avail. She has sent several telegrams to her brother, Dr. F. J. Shadd, assuring him of her safety in New York and of the terrible experience she went through during the passage of the steamer home.

Miss Shadd left Washington some time ago for a trip on one of the United Fruit Company's steamers. Before taking ship for the homeward journey nothing was heard of the hurricane which was on its way from the Caribbean sea. But it was not many days before the full force of the wind got the Admiral Schley in its grasp and considerable damage was done before the steamer got into calm waters.

The afterthought of the ship was crushed in the ventilators were carried away and the dead lights were smashed. These injuries to the ship with many minor ones gave the passengers much cause for alarm, but after what seemed an interminable time the ship forced its way out of the storm zone and arrived in New York in safety.
